“Across all phases speaking is the least well developed of all the skills. Students’ inability to be able to say what they want to say in a new language has a negative impact on their confidence and enthusiasm.”

Talking to Learn Project

Summary of project activities

- Student questionnaires and analysis
- Development and use of speaking materials in the classroom
- Teacher inter-school observations
- Evaluation of approaches trialled
- Materials shared on wikis
What do you think we mean by unplanned or spontaneous speaking?

- Lack of prior preparation
- Absence of written support
- The immediacy of the experience
- Like a conversation
- Not knowing the questions/answers in advance

289 students from Years 7 – 10 from 5 different secondary schools were asked.
Why do you think unplanned or spontaneous speaking is an important focus in language learning?

Students feel that what they can do without notes/preparation is what they 'truly' know.

They also mention the link between spontaneous speaking and increased confidence.

"Because in real life you don't know what the other person is going to say."

2/3 students asked equate spontaneous speaking with 'real life' activity.

"To make sure you definitely know it and are able to have conversations without reading off a sheet."
Define a confident language learner - how would he/she cope in an unplanned speaking situation?

1) Most other answers stress fluency as key
2) Fewer mention accuracy
3) Top set students most likely to mention accuracy AND fluency together
4) A few mention quality of language, including range of vocabulary, tense use, opinions, extended answers - particularly Year 10 learners and 9 top sets
5) Rare answers mention attributes of a confident learner mentioned were: risk-taking, not afraid of mistakes, responds readily, good pronunciation
6) Very few mentioned these strategies: listen carefully to pick out key words and understand the question, take time to think, use words and structures they know, ignore mistakes and keep going, use gestures and facial expression to help support meaning

"They would cope really well because they would speak confidently and spontaneously really easily'
Speaking targets

- Give detailed information
- Express personal opinions
- Justify points of view
- Use longer sequences of speech
- Use a variety of vocabulary and structures
- Use time references
- Refer to the past
- Refer to the future

Do these speaking targets work for spontaneous talk?

Can learners have these sorts of targets in their heads in an unplanned speaking situation?

If not, what targets or strategies would we give to learners who are trying to hold a 'conversation' in the target language?
• Listen to the question VERY carefully – work to make sense of it

• Buy yourself time with a ‘hesitation’ word

• Think of something you know you can say quickly – e.g. Repeat back a couple of words of the question with raised intonation - ¿Todos los días?

• Use what you know how to say when you put your answer together (not necessarily exactly what you want to say)

• Keep talking for as long as you can – it’s always easy to add in a ‘por ejemplo’ or an opinion

• When you are beginning to run out of flow, ask a question! (¿Y tú?)

• Use other ‘help’ to get your message across well – i.e. expression, emotion – sound like you mean it + facial expressions + body language + gestures

“A confident language learner wouldn't panic, would listen carefully for key words to respond to and take time to think about answer.”

“A confident learner would use the words they do know to turn the conversation to what they are comfortable to speak about - use heavy facial expression and body language.”

“A confident learner would be able to use what they know already to come up with appropriate responses - and maybe even ask new questions.”

You have been on holiday in Austria and meet a friend to tell them about your trip. You should be prepared to ask and answer questions. You might discuss:

- the town/village you visited
- the activities you undertook
- what you thought of Austria
- what there is, in general, for tourists to do
- whether you want to visit Austria again or not, and why (not)
