Infinitive verbs

Use two meanings in English for infinitive verbs in French:

C'est important d'écouter le prof. → It's important to listen to the teacher.

Écouter le prof, c'est important. → Listening to the teacher is important.

Possessive adjectives

The adjectives 'my' and 'your' have different forms to match the gender of the noun they describe:

mon frère, ton chien
ma sœur, ta famille

Present tense -ER verbs

Rouge Knowledge Organiser - Spring Term B

Translating the French present tense into English

English has two present tense forms but French has one:

Tu écoutes une chanson.

🧐 You listen to a song.

🧐 You are listening to a song.

This is for a regular, repeated action in the present, like a routine.

Adverbs of time tell us which English meaning to use:

Tu écoutes une chanson tous les jours.

🧐 You listen to a song every day.

Tu écoutes une chanson en ce moment.

🧐 You are listening to a song at the moment.

This is for an ongoing action, now.

Indefinite article – 'some'

Remember! To say a (or an) in French use un before a masculine noun and une before a feminine noun. To say some use des for all nouns:

Il y a des ballons.

Il y a des bouteilles.

Making nouns plural

As in English, we can add an -s to the end of most French words to make them plural. However, the -s is silent in French! (SFC)

You cannot tell by listening to a French noun whether it is singular or plural so always check its determiner.

Bonne Année ! Literally 'Good year!' it means 'Happy New Year!'. It is the first thing you say to everyone you talk to for the first time in January. In France, you have the whole month of January to souhaiter la bonne année. You can say Bonne année ! or Bonne année et bonne santé ! (Happy New Year and good health!)
